Shanghai Chenghuang Temple

Chenghuang is one of the most revered deities in ancient Han Chinese religious and cultural traditions. The area is also home to a world-renowned small commodities market, where you can find every imaginable trinket—and even some beyond your imagination. Together, the Chenghuang Temple (a Taoist shrine), the Old Chenghuang Temple Snacks, the Lotus Pond, the Mid-Lake Pavilion, and the iconic Nine-Zigzag Bridge form a unique cultural and tourism emblem of Shanghai's historic "old town area."

As a classical garden located in Anren Street, Yu Garden was constructed by a government officer in Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) as a special gift for his parents. The pavilions, halls, rockeries, and ponds in the garden all bear unique characteristics. The ginkgo tree in the garden was said to be planted by the first owner of the garden about 400 years ago.

Xintiandi, a landmark urban tourism destination in Shanghai, seamlessly blends the city's historical heritage with East-West cultural fusion. It is built upon the foundation of Shikumen (stone-gate) architecture¹³, a quintessential symbol of Shanghai's modern-era residential neighborhoods. For the first time, the original residential function of Shikumen was reimagined and innovatively transformed into a commercial hub¹⁶, revitalizing these culturally rich historical buildings into a vibrant leisure and entertainment complex featuring dining, shopping, and performance venues³⁴.

A large yellow outline of a triangle is centered over the text. Several smaller yellow triangles and lines are scattered around the main graphic.
