Hannah Johnstone is the University's first Fulbright Scholar and will soon embark on a 10-month fellowship as an English teacher for high school students in Malaysia.

As an undergraduate, Hannah taught English to immigrants and low income families at University Settlement House of New York City and to high school students at One Heart Source in Montego Bay, Jamaica.

Committed to bringing high quality education to marginalized populations, Hannah worked as a third grade teacher with Teach for America before starting her Fulbright Fellowship.

“I have always believed in challenging the misconceptions and flawed ideas surrounding the idea of ‘foreign’, a problematic word in and of itself, by pushing myself to have uncomfortable experiences, form relationships and partake in discussions to better understand that which is not familiar to me.”

“Taking time to understand a culture is just as consuming as working a full-time job. In Paris, I read French literature on the metro, followed the Syrian immigration issue in the news and in anthropology class, and made my best attempt to speak French with the locals.”

“花时间去学习了解一种文化所需的精力，不亚于一份全职工作。在巴黎进行海外学习时，我利用搭乘地铁的间隙阅读法国文学，紧追新闻中关于叙利亚移民的问题，学习人类学课程，尽最大努力和当地人讲法语。”
“Integrating with people from different communities and understanding cultural differences while working on projects together has definitely prepared me for this role.”

New Work Visa Policy

Since November 2016, a new Chinese work permit policy has allowed employers in the Shanghai Pilot Free Trade Zone and Shanghai Zhangjiang National Innovation Demonstration Zone to hire international graduates from Chinese universities (NYU Shanghai alumni qualify) directly out of college. As a result, a number of NYU Shanghai’s first international alumni are living and gainfully working in Shanghai.

自2016年11月起，在上海地区高校取得本科及以上学历且在“双自”地区就业的外国留学生，可申请办理外国人就业手续和工作类居留许可。上海纽约大学的首届国际毕业生成为新政的首批受益者。

One important skill I learned at NYU Shanghai is to set concrete plans for achieving my goals and to absolutely follow them to completion.

Kenny Song

Home Country: United States
Major: Computer Science
Destination: Google, Associate Product Manager
Post Graduation Location: California, USA

Kenny Song graduated from NYU Shanghai with a double major in Computer Science and Mathematics—and a job offer from Google in California.

Kenny began his career as Associate Product Manager after a series of internships with the tech giant, first as a software developer at Google’s New York office during his sophomore year, followed by another internship the following year at Google’s corporate research lab in California where he worked with the Project Loon team to deliver internet access to remote areas using high altitude LTE-equipped balloons—a project he described as so “amazingly cool that only Google would be crazy enough to take it on.”

Back on campus, Kenny’s hands-on experience in the tech industry inspired him to introduce the “hackathon” concept to NYU Shanghai together with a group of like-minded students. He served as the first student government president of NYU Shanghai and worked to forge relationships with his student government counterparts in New York and Abu Dhabi.

“我在上海纽约大学学习、打磨的一项重要技能，就是制定出切实具体的计划，严格执行每一步，直到最终达成目标。”
For a Dutch teenager, flying across the globe to study for an undergraduate degree at a startup university in China is a bold step, even for one who has lived abroad before. Cato van Schaik, who spent two years of high school in Mbabane, Swaziland, remembers boarding her flight to China “with a suitcase full of junk and a heart full of fear”. Her spirit of adventure was rewarded with the discovery of a fascinating new culture and language that has since become the focus of her future plans.

During her four years at NYU Shanghai, van Schaik developed a passion for the Chinese language that continued to grow as she learned more about the country’s history and culture. Since graduating with a degree in Global China Studies, van Schaik has continued to improve her Chinese language skills, completing an immersion program in Guilin and embarking on a one-year intensive language program at National Taiwan University.

She is particularly interested in how language can offer insights into areas of political culture and philosophy, and is working to reach a fluency level essential to pursuing advanced Chinese studies.

“No matter where I go for graduate schools or for a job, I do want to maintain a connection with my experience in China, and no matter what, Chinese will be important.”

“无论在哪里读研或工作，我都希望延续自己与中国的联系，学中文对我来说至关重要。”
“I love NYU Shanghai’s international atmosphere as well as its pioneering spirit. Everything you aspire to accomplish depends on your drive and initiative to work hard for it.”

名富布赖特学者

Established by renown American statesman J. William Fulbright in 1946, the Fulbright Program facilitates a vision for mutual understanding through a series of highly selective grants and exchange opportunities. J. William Fulbright's political career of over thirty years in the U.S. Congress was distinguished by his unequalled contribution to international affairs, and his vision for mutual understanding shaped the extraordinary exchange program bearing his name. Since its inception, approximately 370,000 “Fulbrighters” have participated in the highly prestigious program.

The most powerful thing you can say about yourself is that you empower others – that wherever you go, you are invested in your community, in your companies, in your classrooms, in making this world a better place. This is the most important lesson I learned from NYU Shanghai.
