

RESEARCH SUPPORT POSITION RESEARCH ASSOCIATE

Position Summary

We are currently seeking a full-time research associate to support ongoing research projects on human perception and action in the lab directed by Prof. Li Li at New York University Shanghai (<https://research.shanghai.nyu.edu/centers-and-institutes/brain/people/li-li>). Current research approaches in the lab include behavioral testing with virtual reality technique, eye-tracking, brain-imaging, and studying various brain-damaged patient populations. This position is ideal for (although not restricted to) college graduates who intend to apply to related graduate programs in Neural Science, Cognitive Science, or Psychology, or anyone who seeks to eventually pursue a research career in these fields.

Responsibilities

The research associate will work closely with Prof. Li, the postdocs and graduate students in the lab to implement research plans and ensure the lab operates smoothly and efficiently. Research duties include assisting in conducting research experiments and analyzing data using quantitative and statistical methods. Administrative duties include maintaining research equipment, supplies, and software.

Qualification

- Minimum Bachelor's degree, majoring in Psychology, Cognitive Science, Neuroscience, or a related discipline
- Research experience in studying human behavior and the underlying neural mechanisms that requires attention to details
- Experience with computer programming (e.g., C/C++, Matlab, Python) would be an advantage
- Good knowledge of English as a working language
- Good interpersonal and communication skills to work in an international and cross-cultural environment
- Strong work ethics and a positive work attitude
